

Body of Harriman Boy Fished From Canal By Chums

Nine-Year-Old Albert Ladue Drowns At Bloomsdale Road Bridge

NONE SAW FATALITY

Chief Aungst, of Harriman, Requests Prompt Notice In Such Emergencies

The first drowning to occur in this immediate vicinity occurred yesterday when nine-year-old Albert Ladue, 350 Hayes street, Harriman, lost his life in the canal near the Bloomsdale road bridge.

The lad had left his home but a few hours before and like other boys had gone to take a swim. Whether or not he was attacked with cramps or ventured beyond his depth can only be conjectured. The body was found by some of his playmates shortly after three o'clock. Two doctors were rushed to the scene and the police from Harriman were summoned but life was extinct. Albert was dressed in his bathing clothes.

Arthur Aungst, chief of the Harriman police, today requested that, in cases of discovering persons overboard, or other accident cases, those making the discovery communicate at once with the police or fire bureau of the Township. "We have equipment here for recovering bodies from the water and we should be the first to receive the report, or else word should be sent to the hospital," he said.

When the policemen reached the scene yesterday it was quite some time after the body had been recovered. Life was probably extinct when the body was taken from the water, but Chief Aungst believes nothing should deter his men being called in times of such emergency or the immediate dispatch of the supposed corpse to the hospital.

The father of the drowned lad is quite prominent in Harriman. He is employed in the shipyard and plays on the Merchant Baseball Team. A little sister is also a mourner with the father and mother, over Albert's untimely death.

Troops Dispatched After King's Placating Speech

By International News Service.
LONDON, June 23—The good effects of King George's speech at Belfast when he appealed to the hostile Irish factions "to forgive and forget" have been lessened by the Government's preparations for the extension of martial law in southern Ireland, according to the opinion expressed by the Times today. This newspaper said.

"The government as a whole has cut rather a sorry figure and failed to play the game towards the sovereign by an astounding announcement of martial law preparations."

According to the Daily Express the War Office is preparing to send 15,000 additional troops into Ireland.

Red Cross May Abandon Community Nursing Work

Report of Bristol Branch Shows Much Good Accomplished, But States It Must Cease If Contributions Are Not Forthcoming.

The Bristol branch of the American Red Cross today issued a statement in which the work of Miss Jones, community nurse, is reviewed. A letter covering an outline of the work which Miss Jones does, explaining its value to the community was mailed to day to local press, churches and organizations and in it the Red Cross states that unless the work were better supported it will have to be discontinued.

During the month of May Miss Jones made 181 visits, weighed and measured 1500 school children and gave a course of 12 lessons in First Aid.

"Miss Jones has been here a year and a half and her work in that time has demonstrated the need for such a worker, and the blessing her services are to all who have received them has been demonstrated," the statement says.

The expense of the service has been shared by the Red Cross and the Metropolitan Insurance Company, who pay for their policyholders.

The local Red Cross has received its full share of the Roll Call money, and are now dependent upon their own efforts to raise money for Miss Jones' services." All money collected at this time will be retained in the town, and used entirely for the Nursing Service. No part of it will be sent to American Red Cross Headquarters.

Further the letter says: "If this community nursing service is to continue, the Bristol people will have to be called upon to help it. No one questions the need of this service in Bristol, and the loss it would be if it were given up. So an appeal is made to all the citizens of Bristol to contribute to this good work in their own town and for their own people. It is the hope of the committee that everyone will contribute to this cause."

Contributions may be sent to Mrs. J. Fred Wagner, treasurer, 435 Radcliffe street, Bristol, Pa.

The appeal is signed by Mary W. Swain, chairman of nursing committee.

Bristol Clergymen Take A Trip Up The Delaware

The association of ministers of Bristol which organized about a month ago today embarked on one of the river steamers for a trip up the scenic Delaware.

The preachers but recently organized and it is planned to have every individual in charge of a church in Bucks County to join the new association. So far only local clergymen have joined.

It was the intention of the clergymen to make the outing today one devoted to recreation and pleasure. There will be little business of importance discussed and in fact the new organization does not anticipate getting into real action much before fall.

Big Boulder From River Bed Will Be A Memorial

A large boulder taken from the Delaware river, near Trenton, is to be placed at the entrance of Trenton's proposed parkway as a memorial to John Fitch, whose commercial steamboat the first of its kind in the world, plied the historic Delaware 10 years before the "Clermont" made famous by John Fulton steamed up the waters of the Hudson.

Major L. Lyon, chief engineer in charge of dredging the upper Delaware, was requested sometime ago to secure a suitable boulder for this purpose. The rock secured weighs five tons and is six feet in height, by three feet six inches at the base and two feet nine inches at the top. It is proposed to place a bronze tablet suitably inscribed in the rock.

The rock was taken from the river's bed about 45 feet below the railroad bridge and about 300 feet from the Pennsylvania shore.

Native of Bucks County, He Resided in Bristol Forty Years

Edmund H. Groom, a well known Bristol resident and a veteran employee of the Pennsylvania Railroad, died yesterday afternoon shortly after three o'clock in the Hahnemann hospital, Philadelphia, where he had been a patient since Sunday, June 5th.

The deceased had been ill for many months with a complication of diseases and on June 5th went to the Hahnemann hospital to have an operation performed. He was operated on the day he entered the institution and appeared to have recovered from its effects. A complication of diseases was the cause of his death. The body was brought to Bristol last evening and taken to his late residence on Jefferson avenue.

Mr. Groom was in his 72nd year. He is survived by his wife, one daughter, Mrs. Ellis Ratcliffe, of Bristol; two sons, Henry, of Philadelphia; and Edmund, of Bristol.

Born at Wrightstown, Bucks County, Pa., August 19, 1850, Mr. Groom was a native Bucks Countyman. He continued to make the county his home for a life time. He resided in Bristol for about forty years and worked on the Pennsylvania Railroad for fifty years. He began his career with the P. R. R. April 1, 1869 as a track laborer on the Camden and Amboy Division. He was transferred to the New York Division in 1874 as assistant track foreman and on April 5, 1881 he became the track foreman at Morrisville and then later was assigned to Bristol, where he remained until he severed his relations with the company, being retired March 19, 1919 and pensioned June 1, of that year. He was a member of the Pennsylvania Employee's Voluntary Relief Association for twenty-six years.

After his retirement from active service with the company, a group of his fellow employees gathered on an appointed occasion at his home and presented him with a handsome gold watch, suitably engraved, in recognition of his long service and association with them.

Hot Wave and Drought Are Likely To Come To A Close

Thundershowers Tonight May Bring Relief From Heat and Quench Thirst of Parched Soil of Bucks County Farms.

Thundershowers tonight will probably end the hot wave and drought—which Bristol is both suffering from and enjoying.

Yesterday summer's first real warm wave—hit Bristol a stinging blow and when the mercury climbed over the 90 mark, people here began at once to argue that this summer is going to be a hot one. The heat continued throughout last night and sleeping was somewhat of a difficult proposition.

The temperature brought out the bathers in droves and every point in this section where bathing is indulged in was crowded throughout the afternoon and evening.

At the foot of Dorrance street a great crowd gathered and while it consisted mostly of children, the river was black with them. They swam and splashed about right up to dark. They enjoyed themselves to the fullest extent.

Over at the head of Burlington Island is a spot which is fast growing in popularity. When the river was dredged and the sand banked up on the shore it left a beach which swimmers say is ideal for bathing. "It is just like Atlantic City," said one last night, who had indulged during the afternoon. "The sand over there is hot and dry just like that at the shore."

It is estimated that at least 50 were gathered at this spot yesterday. Last night saw another group bathing at this spot.

Another popular place is in the canal at the locks near the P. R. R. freight station. Last night a big crowd gathered here and spent several hours bathing in the cool waters. There were little tots and adults of advanced ages. It was a jolly good natured bunch and there were many swimmers in the groups.

Bristol's mermaids are out as usual again this year and many girls have accomplished the tasks of swimming the river, doing fancy diving and other water stunts.

Postmaster And Business Man of Washington's Crossing Accused

TO ANSWER IN COURT

Two prominent residents of Washington Crossing, Bucks County, have been landed in jail at Doylestown, charged with robbing several bungalows along the Upper Delaware River section. One of the men is the postmaster at the historic village and the other is a business man.

They are being held to await the September term of Criminal Court.

At a hearing before Justice of the Peace Wist, in Yardley, following their arrest by the State police from the Langhorne station, the men it is alleged, admitted the theft eight months ago of a lighting plant from the summer hotel of Thomas Inzirella, near Washington's Crossing and some furniture from the bungalow of Raymond Margum along the Delaware, near the town.

The lighting plant was sold by Ryan to a customer, it is said, and the furniture, it is declared was found in Ryan's home. The men are charged with breaking, entering, larceny and burglary.

Japanese Reports Filled With Rumor Of War

By International News Service.
LONDON, June 23—The Daily Express today printed the following cablegram from its Tokio correspondent:

"Maritime insurance companies have been asked for and are granting rates to cover the risk of war between Japan and the United States within the next twelve months. This concrete expression of fear is haunting every port on the Pacific from the shores of America to the Persian gulf. The naval programs of both countries are interpreted as evidence that they are preparing for war. Japan has begun building sixteen 'post Jutland' ships in answer to the eighteen on the American program.

"The Navy Department has ordered a division of dreadnaughts and destroyers added to the Pacific fleet. There is an analogy to pre-war preparations in the north sea in the armament race of Japan and America.

Furtive Craft May Be Flying The Jolly Roger

A Swift, Oil-Burning Vessel Being Sought as Supposed Pirate

COAST BEING COMBED

Two Girls May Aid in Solving Mystery of Missing Ships

BY W. H. ATKINS

Staff Correspondent I. N. S.
WASHINGTON, June 23—Government bureaus co-operating in efforts to solve the mystery of ships recently missing off Cape Hatteras, today pinned their hope to the probability that a world search now on will establish the identity of a mysterious silent oilburning vessel which ignored distress calls while in the path of the disabled schooner Carol A. Deering.

Ship logs everywhere are under search for clues to the whereabouts of this silent traveler. She will be traced among marine and insurance companies, of all vessels passing off the North Carolina coast on the dates fixed for the ships listed as lost.

The keeper of the Diamond Shoals Lightship made a futile effort to signal the unidentified oil burner to go to the aid of the Deering, when the schooner reported her anchors lost. But the oil burner passed on in the Deering's course, without rendering aid or responding to the lightship's call. The lightship keeper is said to have provided a description of the ship although her name apparently had been painted out.

Officials who juggled the various theories advanced for the several ship mysteries, were contemplating to day the possibility that Russian pirates, by some pre-arranged scheme, had mutinied, wrested control of the ship first from its officers and began raiding first one ship then another, as they came within reach.

Not a vestige of conclusive evidence of any kind has been developed from the investigations thus far to clear up the mystery that surrounds the disappearance.

NORFOLK, Va., June 23—Two young women may be the means of assisting the government to a solution of the deep sea mystery which cloaks the fate of more than a dozen ships which have disappeared without trace, it was learned today. The women are Miss Lulu M. Wormwell, of Portland, Maine, and Miss Barbara E. Bauer, of Big Springs, Texas, both of whom have already furnished the government with valuable clues.

Miss Wormwell's father was master of the Schooner Carol A. Deering which came ashore with all sails set on the Virginia coast on January 30. The schooner proved to be deserted but no trace of the crew could be found. So mysterious were the circumstances that seamen termed the Miss Wormwell has identified the Deering "a modern flying dutchman." Handwriting in a note washed ashore in a bottle on the Carolina coast as that of Henry Hatch, a member of the crew of the Deering.

The fate of the members of the crew of the Deering has never been solved and government agents are combing the Carolina coast in hope that the discovery of the bottle may lead to fresh information.

It has been learned that a "silent oil-burning ship" of mysterious character passed the Deering but failed to render assistance. Government agents are trying to find out more about this ship. One theory is that it is manned by a Russian Bolshevik crew which is preying upon shipping throughout the seven seas.

OFF-HAND LEGISLATION

Growth is usually a reason for self-congratulation, but that is not so in the case of Bristol's attainment of place as a third-class school district. Bristol's possession of a 5,000 population puts it in that rating and thus causes the Bristol school board to receive less state aid than any other school district in Bucks County.

As stated in these columns yesterday, our school district will receive but 35 per cent. of the minimum salary of the elementary grade teachers, while all the other school districts in the county receive 50 per cent. The amendments to the school laws passed at the last session of the Legislature wiped out other State appropriations and substituted an appropriation on the rating above.

Not only is the state aid thus decreased, but, the State Legislature has ordered increases in the teachers' salaries. Therefore, the Bristol School Board and the taxpayers of Bristol have been ordered to pay out more money and are given less assistance in paying it.

On the face of it, the situation appears to have been brought about by ill-considered, or inconsiderate, legislative action. The conditions, especially that of Bristol, do not seem to have been thoroughly studied by those who made the amendments to the school laws, or such an injustice could not have been done Bristol. The amendments to the school laws were no doubt made without exhaustive study of revenue and population conditions of all the school districts of the state.

It is easy to discern, however, the manner in which the State Legislature met two urgent demands which were before it. The manner in which the demands were met has resulted in the situation which the Bristol School Board now faces, viz, that of having to pay out more money and receiving less aid in doing so.

The first demand the Legislature faced was for general economy. The easiest and most off-hand way of economizing was, of course, to cut down state aid.

The second demand was for higher salaries for the teachers. That demand was nation-wide, so to speak. The public had enlisted itself with the teachers and there was no way for any state legislature to escape meeting that issue.

So the Pennsylvania State Legislature cheerfully gave the teachers a raise in salary—and smiled complacently at its own magnanimity.

Thus the Legislature took the "easiest way"—gave everybody what they asked for—but didn't, apparently, burden itself with much thought as to the ultimate consequences of its off-hand disposal of the urgent demands that caused the legislation in question.

OVERDOING CONSERVATION

One of the most popular movements in this country was that for the conservation of resources. Back in President Roosevelt's term it was recognized that the American people had scattered their boundless wealth with spendthrift hands. They had slaughtered their forests with wasteful cutting, given away valuable lands for a song, etc.

It was a fine, noble movement to stop this prodigality. Yet it has often seemed as if the people had become so afraid that some one would make a dollar, that they had tied up many resources so no one could touch them.

Take the case of Alaska. Here is a rich reserve of natural resources. Alaska's coal, its timbers, its paper pulp, ought to be rolling down now in great supplies, providing basic needs for moderate costs.

But the people became so fearful of these resources, that they have locked them up under government control. They are not being developed. Where there were 36,400 people in Alaska in 1910, the number had decreased to 27,883 in 1920.

Of the natural resources of the country 98 per cent. belong to the government and only two per cent to private parties. People have not been willing to go up there to develop the country, because of the popular fear that some one would make some money. So the country is deprived of resources and products it might have.

Such resources should be handled judiciously, so that monopolists could not make exorbitant profits. But people will not put funds into development, unless there is some return for enterprise and risk.

The same condition exists in regard to natural resources in various states of the union. The people do not want their wealth squandered, but they want it developed so the present generation can have some good out of it.

PROCESS OF DEFLATION

The business depression has not been as serious as many people feared. Bank clearings run about 20 per cent below last year, so that the falling off in volume is not large, because it is being done on a lower level of prices. Many merchants say the actual sale of articles is as good as a year ago.

There is much unemployment, though a good deal has been caused by strikes. It can not be claimed that the recovery has been as fast as had been hoped. Two reasons for this slower recovery might be named. One is that no one country can recover from war conditions at once when the rest of the world is still upset. There has been many people who believed that the United States should look after its own interests and let the rest of the world go to the devil.

If the rest of the world goes to the devil, the United States will suffer, as the devil was always a deceiver and never pays for the goods he buys. The United States has got to help the rest of the world get over its troubles, and it can not stand aloof in selfish isolation.

The second great difficulty has been the unevenness of the deflation. The farmers have seen their products drop to a point only 15 to 23 per cent above 1914. Meanwhile the things the farmer has to buy have not dropped in any such proportion. Union labor, according to the U. S. department of labor, gets 99 per cent more than it did in 1914.

The reason for unemployment, is that manufactured products still cost too high. But the people must be patient, and remember that these changes can not come all at once. It is easily possible to exaggerate economic evils.

The millions of unemployed can get work, and can bring prices down, when they are willing to work for wages comparing with the price the farmer gets for food. The volume of business now being done would have been considered very large five years ago. Any business man who will hustle and keep his products well advertised, can still prosper.

The rail labor board's wage decision seems to be better than first supposed. Both railroad executives and workers are dissatisfied with it.

The proposal to reduce the size of paper currency raises the question, whose pockets are o'er full of the stuff?

The difference between the demand that the former kaiser be hanged and the sentencing of a German sergeant to a few months in jail is about two years.

As the affair in Jersey City nears, Ireland probably gets a good laugh at the to-do we make over one fight.

OBSERVATIONS

The housewife, who today is complaining about the tar on the streets, is the same one, who finds fault with the dust caused by the heavy traffic.

Last night we heard "Link" Hibbs saying what he would do if he had a $100,000. One of the things which he would do would be to provide a fine recreation ground for the children of Bristol. "Then I would let them enjoy themselves," he said.

There is only one person we know of in Bristol who is satisfied with this kind of weather. He is Arthur Wright. The hotter the better so far as Arthur is concerned.

Ralph Snelson is now a full fledged life insurance agent. You can't meet him but what he wants to talk life insurance. He is at it day and night.

The trouble with other people who would like to have Rockefeller's wealth is that they are not willing to start the way he did.

The most regrettable feature of mob outbreaks like that at Tulsa is that the guilty individuals nearly always escape punishment.

In saying one should keep only enough to live on comfortably, John Wanamaker seems to have overlooked getting it as a necessary preliminary.

It is now up to the railroad managers to see that the money saved in wages is wisely spent.

The business of Washington hotels may have been hit by the simple inauguration day ceremonies, but the lobbyists probably are making up for that.

Wouldn't it be a fine world if it were as easy for a man to live up to the Ten Commandments as it is for him to live up to his income?

Modern Naval Architecture Provides For Utilization of Every Square Inch of Space

Food Served Aboard Flagship New Mexico Rivals That Served in Highest Priced American Hotels--Cleanliness Is the First Tenet.

This is the second of a series of five articles on the United States Navy of today and the lessons are being made effective as a result of the World War.

BY CHARLES E. HUGHES

Staff Correspondent I. N. S.
U. S. S. NEW MEXICO, FLAGSHIP PACIFIC FLEET, LOS ANGELES HARBOR, CAL. June 23—While American naval designers have been striving for years to make every inch of warship space effective when needed for fighting purposes, they have not overlooked the great human element of making and keeping the officers and men contented by providing them with comfortable quarters.

On the superdreadnought New Mexico one will find the utmost care has been taken to give every man aboard a good home. He not only has a good place to sleep and to pass his spare time, but has plenty of good, wholesome food, an adequate supply of comfortable clothing and the best of medical care.

Because of the limited space for the crew of 1,680 men, and because of the necessity of utilizing this space in the daytime for other purposes, sleeping hammocks have been provided. These are comfortable and easily kept clean. Besides, they can be readily packed away.

The complement of eighty officers have cabins which are furnished with steel furniture and desks. Junior-grade officers have wardrobes for their clothing. But everything is so compactly arranged in the cabins that there is not an inch of space is wasted. There is not a pound of unnecessary weight.

The crew dines at plain mess tables. The officers have their own mess. Food is prepared and furnished free to the crew by Uncle Sam. The officers have to pay for their food.

The crew of an American fighting ship is given food containing a daily average of at least 4,000 calories. The average man could do a hard day's work on far less than that, according to experts. It is said that 3,000 calories would be a good daily supply of food fuel. But the American naval men get the 4,000 allowance on the theory that when they need it they will have it.

The most scrupulous care is taken on the New Mexico to keep the food wholesome and clean before and while it is being prepared for the messes. The cooks' galleys are as free from dirt as it is possible for soap and water to make them. Every cooking utensil is constantly under the inspection of many eyes. A cook never knows when he will be called upon to show some prying officer just what is going on in the galley.

Each man is given a ration of sixty-eight cents' worth of food a day, served in three hearty meals. There are fruits in season and eggs on the well-balanced menus. There is no monotonous sameness to the fare.

There are menus for two days aboard the New Mexico: Breakfast—Apple sauce, pork and beans, catsup, hot cornbread, bread, butter and coffee. Dinner—bean soup, boiled ham, boiled cabbage and turnips (Irish style) boiled potatoes, mustard and pickles, bread, butter and coffee. Supper—Fried bologna, brown gravy, creamed onions, rice, custard pudding, bread, butter, tea. Breakfast—Corn meal mush and milk, corned beef hash, catsup, two boiled eggs, bread, butter and coffee. Dinner—Vegetable soup, pot roast of beef, brown gravy, boiled sweet potatoes, asparagus tips, with sauce; mince pie, bread, butter and coffee. Supper—Cold sliced beef tongue, sliced cheese, mustard, lyonnaise potatoes, pickles, bread butter, tea.

In the officers' mess the food is as excellent in quality and as daintily served as in any of the highest-priced hotels of an American city.

So if the reader happens to have a son a brother, or a sweetheart in the American navy, do not worry about his "cats." Unless you live on the fat of the land yourself, he has your fare at least equalled and perhaps beaten. If the boy in the navy is under-nourished it is because he has something wrong with his "innards," as the saying is down East.

The food on the New Mexico is cooked by steam, or on ranges, with the exception of bread and pastries. These are prepared in electric ovens. The steam-heated kettles and the electric ovens can be kept at exactly the correct temperatures without the slightest worry. The ranges are oil-burners, and the heat in them can be kept at an even temperature. Thus the troubles of the cooks are limited to cooking enough to satisfy everyone.

There are no frills about the way in which the crew consume its food. As one lad remarked to the correspondent: "We eat heartily because we are really hungry. We don't gossip much at meal time. We like to have the meal over so we will have time for something else."

"I'm sorry we had to have trouble," Samson remarked. "It's the only spot on the day. I'll never forget the kindness of the people of New Salem."

"The raising bee is a most significant thing," said Kelso. "Democracy tends to universal friendship—each works for the crowd and the crowd for each, and there are no favorites. Every community is like the thousand friends of Thebes. Most of its units stand together for the common good—for justice, law and honor. The schools are spinning strands of democracy out of all this European wood. Railroads are to pick them up and weave them into one great fabric. By and by we shall see the ten million friends of America standing together as did the thousand friends of Thebes."

"It's a great thought," said Abe. "No man can estimate the size of that mighty phalanx of friendship all trained in one school," Kelso went on. "Two years ago the Encyclopedia Britannica figured that the population of the United States in 1905 would be 168,000,000 people, and in 1965, 672,000,000. Wealth, power, science, literature, all follow in the train of light and numbers. The causes which moved the sceptre of civilization from the Euphrates to western Europe will carry it from the latter to the new world."

"They say that electricity and the development of the steam engine are going to make all men think alike," said Abe. "If that's so democracy and liberty will spread over the earth. I reckon we are near the greatest years in history. It is a privilege to be alive."

"And young," Doctor Allen added. "Young! What a God's blessed thing is that!" said Kelso. "Abe, have ye learned 'The Cotter's Saturday Night'?"

"Not yet. It's a heavy hog to hold, but I'll get a grip on an ear and a hind leg and lift it out o' the pen before long. You see?"

"Don't fail to do that. It will be a help and joy to ye."

"Old Kirkham is a hard master," said Abe. "I hear his bell ringing every time I get a minute's leisure. I'm high through with him. Now I want study rhetoric."

"Only schoolmasters study rhetoric," Kelso declared. "A real poet or a real orator is born with all the rhetoric he needs. Rhetoric is a steed for a light load under the saddle, but he's too warm blooded for the harness. He was for the day of the plumed knight—not for these times. No man of sense would use a prancing horse on a plow or a stone boat. A good plow horse is a beautiful thing. The play of his muscles, the power of his stride are poetry to me, but when he tries to put on style he is ridiculous. That suggests what rhetoric is apt to do to the untrained intellect. If you've anything to say or write, head straight across the field and keep your eye on the furrow."

In the last diary of Samson Henry Traylor is this entry:

"I went to Gettysburg with the President today and sat near him when he spoke. Mr. Everett addressed the crowd for an hour or so. As Kelso would say 'He rode the prancing steed of Rhetoric.' My old friend went straight across the field. When he finished, the field, plowed and harrowed and fertilized by war, had been sowed for all time. The spring's work was done and well done."

At a quarter of ten the doctor rose and said:

"We're keeping Abe from his sleep and wearing the night away with philosophy. I'm going home."

"I came over to see if you could find a man to help me tomorrow," Samson said to Abe. "Harry is going over to do the chinking alone. I want a man to help me on the whipsaw while I cut some boards for the upper flooring."

"I'll help you myself," Abe proposed. "I reckon I'll close the store tomorrow unless Jack will tend it."

"You can count on me," said Jack. "I'm short of sleep anyhow and a day of rest will do me good."

Abe went with his friends to the door beyond which the two boys from Clary's Grove sat as if sound asleep. It is probable, however, that they had heard what Samson had said to Abe.

Next morning Abe and Samson set out for the woods soon after daylight.

"I like that boy Harry," said Abe. "I reckon he's got good stuff in him. The way he landed on Bap McNeil was a caution. I like to see a feller come right up to the scratch, without an invitation just in the nick o' time, as he did. That boy is a likely young colt—strong and limber and well put together and broad between the eyes."

"An' gentle as a kitten," Samson added. "There never was a better face on a boy or a better heart behind it. We like him."

"Yes, sir. He's a well topped young tree—straight and sound and good timber. Looks as if that little girl o' Jack's was terribly took up with him. I don't wonder."

"What kind of a girl is she?" Samson asked.

"Awful shy since the arrow hit her. She don't know what it means yet. She'll get used to that, I reckon. She's a good girl and smart as a steel trap."

Harry Needles went whistling up the road toward the new house with sickle, hoe and trowel. As he passed the Kelso cabin he whistled the tune of "Sweet Nightingale." It had haunted his mind since he had heard it in the woods. He whistled as loudly as ever he could and looked at the windows. Before he had passed, Bim's face looked out at him with a smile and her hand flickered back of the panes and he waved his to her. His heart beat fast as he hurried along.

"I'm not so very young," he said to himself. "I wish I hadn't put on these old clothes. Mrs. Traylor is an awful nice woman but she's determined to make me look like a plow horse. I don't see why she couldn't let me wear decent clothes."

Sarah had enjoyed mothering the boy. His health had returned. His cheeks were ruddy, his dark eyes clear and bright, his tall form erect and sturdy.

He had helped Alexander Ferguson with the making of the fireplace and knew how to mix the mortar. He worked with a will, for his heart was in the new home. It was a fine September morning. The far reaches of the great, grassy plain were dimmed with haze. It was a vast, flowery wilderness, waving and murmuring in the breeze like an ocean. How long those acres, sown by the winds of heaven, had waited for the plowman now arrived!

THEATRES

New Colonial Theatre

As refreshing and invigorating as a vacation best describes "God's Country and the Woman," a pleturization of James Oliver Curwood's story which will be shown at the New Colonial theatre tonight. It is a production that gets in under the skin and stays there. One sits through the entire projection with eyes riveted on the screen and mouth open in amazement. The spectator is carried away by the spirit of the north and is forgetful of all that surrounds save the story depicted on the screen.

So realistic is "God's Country and the Woman" that the audience can fairly scent the pines or feel the arctic blasts that accompany the northern blizzard. The snow scenes are unusual. Undoubtedly they were taken during a severe storm. William Duncan gives a performance of merit. Philp Weyman is the type of role in which this versatile player excels. He displays his physical development and athletic training to advantage in the north woods where a man must fight his way battling man and animals in the struggle for existence. Especially pleasing are his scenes with Nell Shipman and those in which he bests Arnold Lang.

Jean Croisset is ably handled by Edgar Keller. His death scene is worthy of mention. William Bainbridge makes an excellent naturalist. George Holt draws hisses as Arnold Lang. He presents manhood at his worst with out overdoing it or becoming melodramatic. Nell Clark Keller handles the role of Miriam in a commendable manner.

The wolf dogs show a marked degree of intelligence. Much of the action and the effectiveness of the production depend upon these animal players. They are gentle pets with their supposed friends and vicious beasts in the presence of their enemies. At times it appeared that the lives of the players were endangered so realistic was the performance of the dogs.

A scene that should receive mention is the burning of the cabin in which the outlaws have barricaded themselves. The battle before the hut is fired becomes one of the masterpieces of film production. It reminds one of the struggles in the early history of the country and is a perfect visualization of the description written by James Oliver Curwood in the story.

Reduce Those Dangerous Swollen Veins

Physicians are prescribing and hospitals are using a new and harmless, yet very powerful germicide that not only causes enlarged or varicose veins and bunches to become normal, but also reduces goiters, enlarged glands and wens.

Ask any first class druggist for an original two-ounce bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil (full strength) and refuse to accept anything in its place. It is such a highly concentrated preparation that two ounces lasts a long time and furthermore if this wonderful discovery does not produce the results anticipated, you can have the price refunded.

It is not wise for anyone to allow swollen veins to keep on enlarging. Often they burst and cause weeks of pain suffering and loss of employment. Start the Emerald Oil treatment as directions advise and improvement will begin at once. eGnerous sample on receipt of 15 cents. Silver or stamps. International Laboratories, Rochester, N. Y., Your druggist or druggists can supply you.

Forrest Theatre

With hands that well know their way into the secret pockets of life, David Wark Griffith has built a new tale of love and lovers, which was shown as "Dream Street" at the Forrest Theatre the first time yesterday.

It is a story of the unusual. The very winds of beauty seem to blow across it. Mystery and high adventure lurk along the dim streets, folded in fog. Lovely and haunting pictures swim before the delighted eyes. The quick action swarms to a sudden suspense. Even the breath neglects its even measure to race with the thrills, and again relax in sympathy with the sighing sweetness of the two lovers, who only know they are in love.

Much of Griffith is in it, and only a whisper of Thomas Burke, who wrote the stories which suggested certain of the scenes. It is not a member of the family of "Broken Blossoms" for the producer accurately describes "Dream Street" as a dramatic comedy.

exceptional interest: Ralph Graves as James "Spike" McFadden who conquers the girls with his golden voice and the males with his great fists. Carol Dempster is Gypsy Fair, gentle, brave and gay, swift and restless as a bird, with every pulse of her body singing with joy. The brother of "Spike" is Charles Emmet Mack, the property boy of recent months, who had the astounding fortune and great talents to become famous over night as one of the Griffith Players.

The story is laid in a beautiful old street where plain humanity walks the dim pavements with its faces, like all of us, occasionally turned to the stars.

There is one Sway Wan, a Malay adventurer, who sings a mad song: "Love is kind to the least of men, ee-awa, ee-awa," and dreams of making Gypsy Fair, the dancing girl, his wife. The part is played by Edward Pell.

The movement of the drama answers to the love of Spike for Gypsy, the torment and tempest of their love; while affronts to Sway Wan and the jealous interest of the brother, bring complications that weave a spell of absorbing interest such as only Griffith seems able to exert.

Those who like Griffith's work will dwell in happiness at "Dream Street" and those who like action and thrills will find abundance in short those who like the films at all will find utmost satisfaction in this rare and wonderful work.

"Dream Street" will be shown for the last times tonight at the Forrest Theatre.

He looks just like one of the figures on those old fashioned German clocks—but really he is a very modern resident of Munich. The quaint costume and quaint "bicycle" a true antique heirloom are accounted for by the fact that he is taking part in a recent costume parade and festival in Munich.

Hot Wave And Drought Are Likely To Come to A Close

Farmers all over the county report that their crops are suffering from the drought. The ground has dried up and vegetation is literally thirsting for a drink.

Lawns in Bristol are also suffering. Brown patches caused by the blighting strength of the sun's rays appear in many fine grass plots.

The farmers state that there will be shortage of some of their crops through this hot spell. They say they have good reason to complain over the drought, coming as it does after the blight, their fruit tree buds suffer.

ed early in the Spring and on top of the low prices which food stuff are now bringing.

Alexander Dixon, who is an extensive farmer in the lower end of Bucks County, today told the Courier that unless there is rain within the next few days, it is his opinion that farmers will suffer severely. The early planted potatoes are hard hit, he said. "I do not mean particularly the early varieties, but those which were planted early."

Mr. Dixon said that the drought had caused a blight which has done the potatoes much injury. "Those which were planted later are not so far advanced," he said "and of course will not be so seriously injured."

Hay crops in all sections has been shortened at least 40 per cent, farmers said today. This effects the milk and dairy products and will no doubt be felt if the dry spell continues. Pastures are drying up and the grass has been considerably damaged.

Mr. Dixon, who farms the Walnut Grove farms said that similar conditions are to be found throughout the country. "Ground which is level is not effected as much as that which is more or less hilly. The moisture runs off this hilly land and also that which is gravel."

James M. Booz, of Emilie, said conditions in his section were about like those noted above. "Corn is standing up fairly well and will for a few days longer. The hay is short and it will be a small crop in comparison to the one of last season. Potatoes are seriously effected and unless we get rain soon I wouldn't wonder but what the entire crop is a failure."

Lawns are in bad shape. The fine grass plot at the post office and in the park are ruined. Efforts are being made to save the grass at the post office and the lawn is being sprinkled every day.

Private sprinklers are running day and night and this boosts the water consumption. The increase in the use of water is noticeable at the pumping station.

Local dealers in produce are having a hard time finding sufficient stuff to sell. The markets are almost depleted. No berries are to be had and the supply of produce is growing less every day.
